The Adobe Brothers began playing together as a band in 1979. Their initial musical preference consisted of old time fiddle tunes, Bluegrass, and folk music of North America, but this has subsequently expanded to Western Swing, Celtic, Klezmer, blues, and whatever else might be fun to play. Perhaps the greatest musical continuity throughout their existence as a band has been playing for contra and square dances. The Adobe brothers are recognized as one the top New Mexican Contra dance bands. Though the Brothers' musical style might be best categorized as Americana, a typical performance will include tunes and songs from half a dozen countries, as well as material ranging from 19th century Child Ballades to original compositions by the band.

In addition to their superb musicianship and diverse material, the Brothers are noted for their entertaining stage presence featuring a unique style of humor.
